

Gold Member Kerry Fish (IRL) U.C. / Quinlans Fish

Spotlight Target Area: Energy

Kerry Fish are committed to ensuring there is a healthy future for the Irish fishing industry. Every day the team at Kerry Fish work in a sustainable and responsible manner and are committed to reducing the company's environmental impact wherever possible.

One such initiative the company has steadfastly focused upon is the reduction of energy usage in its daily operations. Since the inception of its current sustainability plan in 2019, the company has reduced energy usage per tonne of salmon produced by over 6%. The company operates a robust energy management system and attributes current savings to daily checks on door seals, lighting, and switching off machinery when not in use. Enhanced and ongoing staff training in this area also helps to ensure energy is not being wasted throughout its operations.

About

Established by Michael Quinlan in 1963, Kerry Fish is a family owned seafood business based in Caherciveen, Co Kerry. Continuing on Michael's legacy, today the business is run by his three sons, Liam, Ronan and Fintan. As a multi-strand operation, the company has grown to include a fish processing factory at its head office in Renard, Co. Kerry, fish shops in Caherciveen, Killorglin, Killarney and Tralee, and latterly five seafood restaurants in Killarney, Tralee, Killorglin, Kenmare and Cork.

Since the establishment of Kerry Fish, it has been recognised as supplying the finest sustainable seafood from Ireland's west coast to customers all over the world. The company's philosophy is to use artisan skills, age-old recipes and the finest fresh ingredients to bring customers the best wild, organic and superior Irish smoked salmon.
